ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This project would have never been completed without the support, wisdom and love of the following people that I would like to thank heartfully:

My parents for their love and for always supporting my academic endeavors.

Patricia for her love, her kindness, her different academic perspective and her enthusiasm for my ideas, that make me want to be my best self every day.

Prof. Dr. Michael Kirk, the best supervisor I could have asked for. Thank you for being a sparring partner when I needed one, for giving constructive feedback, for always being available for a chat and for tolerating and channeling my sometimes unconventional approaches.

Prof. Dr. Michael Stephan for his feedback as second supervisor of this thesis.

My colleagues and friends for their input, ideas and support: Dr. Conrad Wiedeler, Sabrina Wittmann, Christian Hönow, Dr. Tobias Vorlaufer, Dr. Tilman Tacke, Georg Glavanovits, Robert Arendt, Heike Bockius.

My research assistants for their invaluable contributions to this thesis: Edgard Robleto and Martin Voß.

All the interview partners who were willing to share their expertise, ideas and perspectives.
